The course will draw both from classical sources (such as Augustine, John Chrysostom, Cyril of Jerusalem, and Thomas Aquinas) and from contemporary texts. The course will prepare students to articulate and critique theologies that connect (or disconnect) liturgy and justice, as well as to connect liturgy and justice in a parish setting.

Modern Christians are astonished to find a wealth of psychological insight and spiritual wisdom in the writings of early Christian desert monks. This course will introduce their teaching on the eight "thoughts" that preoccupy us, a way of describing the passions that was later condensed into "Seven Deadly Sins." The original system, diagnostic and non-judgmental, was a synthesis of ancient philosophy and the practical experience of those famous as "readers of hearts." Their attention to the passions was designed to cultivate insight for sacred reading and freedom for prayer. We will follow the same trajectory, exploring the link between passions and prayer, and the way that monastic prayer has always grown from a close reading of Scripture.

The Rule of Benedict accounts for multiple bodies, both communal and personal, in both its prescriptive and descriptive detail. This unit will focus attention on the theological significance of these bodies, particularly in relation to the centrality of Christ in the Benedictine life and the importance of its incarnational approach to the Christian endeavour.

Bible to be written. Furthermore, the Bible does not speak of God “per se,” but of what God says, how God acts and how God is experienced. The concern of the biblical traditions is always with God in his relationship to the world and to humans and quite especially to Israel. How to grasp the fragility and the resilience of these relations? No one can know what God is really like. People can experience God in different ways, and they bring these experiences to expression. God’s action is experienced by people in a wide range of ways. The texts of the OT speak of this. They bring these experiences to expression in their variety and also in their contradictoriness. So, talking of God in the biblical texts is anything but uniform. The OT could in fact be regarded as an invitation to reimagine our life and our God in different ways, and they bring these experiences to expression. God’s action is experienced by people in a wide range of ways. The texts of the OT speak of this. They bring these experiences to expression in their variety and also in their contradictoriness.

Wisdom Literature’ is a term applied to the OT books of Job, Proverbs, and Ecclesiastes, and sometimes to the Song of Songs. In the Catholic tradition, it also includes the books of Sirach and the Wisdom of Solomon.

As far as NT theology is concerned, the personification of wisdom as co-agent with God in creation turned out to be the most crucial step of OT wisdom speculations. Recent study of the NT has shown that this line of thought emerged very early in the history of Christianity. It can be detected in fragments of hymns embedded in some of the Apostolic letters and it is also recoverable in the Sayings Source. Source: Jesus is represented not only as wise teacher but as personified Wisdom. Consequently, there can be no doubt that the wisdom of Israel, especially in its later developments, provided a major impetus to the formation of Christian theology and ethics. The course – apart from the study of selected passages – aims at helping students to learn how to read scholarly works critically.

The practice of referring to this heterogeneous collection as ‘wisdom writings’ calls for an explanation. Very few of these compositions can be called sapiential in the sense of imparting instruction or addressing themselves to broad issues of a philosophical or theological nature. What is the elusive quality called ‘wisdom’? What, following these biblical texts, does it mean to be wise?

Wisdom of Solomon.

The dynamic which exists between created nature and divine action has been expressed in diverse ways throughout the history of Christian thought, often as a central point of controversy and potential division in the Christian community. This course will work through Patristic, medieval, Reformation, modern, and post-modern sources to explore the variety of ways in which Christian thinkers have expressed the relationship between "nature" and "grace" -- focusing on the way that specific constructions of the dynamic impact views of salvation, sacraments, the nature of the church, and the shape of Christian discipleship.
